Definition and Terminology of Foreign Language in French

The phrase "foreign language in French" translates primarily to langue étrangère. Understanding this term is crucial for anyone studying French or working within French linguistic frameworks. "Langue" means language, and "étrangère" is the adjective for foreign, derived from étranger, meaning foreigner or stranger. Together, they form a phrase that is widely used in educational and conversational contexts to describe a language that is not native to the speaker.

Difference Between Langue Étrangère and Langue Seconde

foreign language in french: Foreign Language Input Rebekah Rast, 2008-03-07 Foreign Language Input: Initial Processing presents the most comprehensive study to date of the starting

The empirical study detailed in the book follows a methodology in which all of the language input provided to the learners from the moment of first exposure is controlled, recorded and transcribed. This input is then quantitatively compared to the learners' performance on language tasks administered at various time intervals up to 8 hours after first exposure. This in-depth analysis of the input and the learners' performance sheds light on questions still unanswered in second language acquisition literature, such as what knowledge is brought to the acquisition process and how learners use this knowledge to process new linguistic information.

Despite its ambiguous and indistinct official status in the country, French remains the preferred foreign language in Nigeria and academia. Michael Akinpelu and Tunde Ajiboye's, French in Multilingual Anglophone Africa: Language, Literature, and Translation in Nigeria discusses how the French language is not only taught as a foreign language in Nigerian higher education, but is also an important linguistic code for literary creation, translation, and interpretation, blending local and international francophone cultures. Part I explores issues related to bilingualism, language resource management, and comparison between French and local languages. Part II considers the French language's exploitation in relation to translation and interpretation with particular interests in cultural challenges. Part III provides historical context tracing the evolution of literary engagement of Nigerian writers' contact with French and evolving perspectives on the language in Nigerian literature from the 1930s to present day. Using case studies, classroom fieldwork, and policy analyses, this book shows how French in multilingual Africa is not just a mode of communication, but a powerful instrument of socio-economic integration and mobility in a globalized world.
