Program Overview

The Fordham University Master of Accounting program is designed to prepare students for leadership roles in accounting and finance through a comprehensive curriculum that combines technical accounting skills with business acumen. This graduate degree is ideal for those seeking to advance their accounting knowledge beyond the undergraduate level or for professionals aiming to fulfill CPA exam requirements. The program is housed within Fordham's Gabelli School of Business, a respected institution known for its commitment to academic excellence and professional relevance. Students benefit from a blend of classroom instruction, case studies, and practical experiences that reflect real-world accounting challenges.

Program Duration and Format

The Master of Accounting degree at Fordham typically spans one year of full-time study, with options for part-time enrollment to accommodate working professionals. Classes are offered on the Rose Hill campus in the Bronx, with some courses potentially available in the evening or through hybrid formats. This flexibility allows students to tailor their educational experience to their personal and professional commitments.

Program Goals

The core objectives of the program include developing expertise in financial accounting, auditing, taxation, and managerial accounting, while fostering critical thinking, ethical decision-making, and effective communication skills. Graduates emerge well-prepared to pass the CPA exam, contribute to strategic business decisions, and adapt to rapidly evolving financial regulations and technologies.

Curriculum and Specializations

Fordham University's Master of Accounting curriculum is structured to cover foundational accounting principles as well as advanced topics essential for professional success. The program balances technical knowledge with broader business concepts, ensuring graduates have a holistic understanding of the accounting field.

Core Coursework

Students are required to complete a series of core courses that provide essential skills and knowledge across key accounting domains. These courses typically include:

- Financial Accounting and Reporting
- Auditing and Assurance Services
- Taxation of Individuals and Entities
- Managerial and Cost Accounting
- Accounting Information Systems
- Business Law and Ethics
- Financial Statement Analysis

Electives and Specializations

To cater to diverse career goals, Fordham offers elective courses that allow students to specialize or deepen their expertise in areas such as forensic accounting, international accounting, or financial planning. These electives provide additional skills and knowledge that enhance employability in competitive accounting sectors.

Admission Requirements

Admission to the Fordham University Master of Accounting program is competitive and seeks candidates with strong academic backgrounds, professional potential, and a commitment to the accounting profession. The application process is designed to assess readiness for graduate-level study and alignment with the program's objectives.

Academic Prerequisites

Applicants typically must hold a bachelor's degree from an accredited institution. While a degree in accounting or a related field is advantageous, Fordham considers candidates from diverse academic backgrounds, often requiring prerequisite coursework in foundational accounting and business subjects.

Application Materials

The application package commonly includes the following components:

- Completed application form
- Official transcripts from all post-secondary institutions
- Resume or curriculum vitae highlighting relevant experience
- Letters of recommendation from academic or professional references
- Statement of purpose outlining career goals and motivations
- GRE or GMAT scores (if required)
- Proof of English proficiency for international applicants (TOEFL or IELTS)

Admission Criteria

The admissions committee evaluates candidates based on academic performance, professional experience, test scores, and the overall fit with the program's mission. Strong quantitative skills and a demonstrated interest in accounting are critical factors in the selection process.

Career Opportunities and Outcomes

Graduates of Fordham University's Master of Accounting program enjoy robust career prospects in a variety of accounting and finance roles. The program's strong reputation and location in New York City provide significant advantages in job placement and professional networking.

Employment Sectors

Alumni commonly pursue careers in the following sectors:

- Public Accounting Firms (Big Four and regional firms)
- Corporate Finance and Accounting Departments
- Government Agencies and Regulatory Bodies
- Consulting Firms specializing in accounting and finance
- Nonprofit Organizations and Educational Institutions

CPA Exam Preparation and Licensure

Fordham's curriculum is specifically tailored to satisfy the 150-credit hour requirement for CPA licensure in most states. The program also offers resources such as CPA review courses and workshops to support students in passing the exam and obtaining certification efficiently.
