Historical Context of the New Deal

The New Deal was a series of programs, public work projects, financial reforms, and regulations enacted by President Franklin D. Roosevelt in response to the Great Depression, which began in 1929. This period was marked by widespread unemployment, economic instability, and social distress. Roosevelt's administration aimed to provide relief for the unemployed, recovery of the economy, and reforms to prevent future depressions. Political cartoons during this period captured this transitional moment, portraying Roosevelt as a figure of hope or as a symbol of government overreach, depending on the artist's viewpoint.

Legislative Milestones of the New Deal

The New Deal included landmark legislation such as the Social Security Act, the National Industrial Recovery Act, and the Agricultural Adjustment Act. Political cartoons frequently highlighted these laws, either praising their benefits or criticizing perceived flaws and unintended consequences.

The Role of Political Cartoons in the 1930s

Platforms and Audience

Major newspapers such as The New York Times, The Chicago Tribune, and The Washington Post regularly published political cartoons, reaching millions of readers.
